Brought to you by the Camden County Board of Freeholders

The Camden County Fair, an annual tradition presented by the Board of Camden County Freeholders, is this weekend on Friday from 4 to 10 p.m. and Saturday from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the county Fairgrounds located at 508 Lakeland Road in Gloucester Township.

At the fair, families and kids can enjoy rides, games, carnival food and food trucks, live music and dance, exhibits, free pony rides, a petting zoo, 4-H youth projects and demonstrations and more.

With summer winding down and the fall quickly approaching, the Camden County Fair serves as an easy way to bring the community and residents back together after months of vacation and beach trips, something Freeholder Jeff Nash says he looks forward to every year.

“The fair has long served as a way for the community to get together and enjoy 4-H displays, rides, music, food and everything that a country fair might stand for and include,” said Nash. “Camden County is happy to be able to provide an event like this for its residents every year.”

Nash says that the thousands of residents who come out every year from the more than 30 municipalities within the county help connect the different communities, no matter how distant they might be, by hosting this event at the county Fairgrounds.

Residents get free admission and parking to the Camden County Fair on both days, while there will also be more than 100 vendors throughout the fair.

“It’s a great venue for family-friendly entertainment and it’s certainly affordable with the parking and admission being free, as well as food prices not being astronomical,” said Nash.

The site of the fair is also next to the home of Camden County’s Office of Sustainability, which has helped to create and promote numerous in-house programs that assist residents in various ways, such as through its tool-lending library, hydroponic greenhouse and more.

According to Director of Sustainability for Camden County Chris Waldron, his office will be providing tours to residents interested in learning more about its efforts out of the Lakeland campus. While keeping it fairly basic, the programs that allow residents to share resources and materials or for the county to donate fruits and vegetables to nonprofits can still be relatively unknown to a majority of county residents.

Inspira Family Fun Fest

On Saturday, September 14th, Inspira Health held their annual Family Fun Fest at Veterans Park here in Gloucester Township. This year’s event was their best yet bringing nearly 2,500 visitors to town!

The event included a 5K race, free health screenings, as well as food and entertainment for the entire family.

Thank you to Inspira for hosting another great event here in town. We hope to see everyone again next year!
